Intro for Middle Schoolers to College Students

Dr. Adolph Brown’s ultimate goal is to help as many young people as he can. As a kid, Dr. Brown knew first hand what it meant to be a youth in trouble. He was poor. He was fatherless. His oldest sibling and only brother Oscar was murdered. Adolph was gang-involved. He was scared and confused. Adolph was also hard working, bright and a leader.

With the help of his stern mother, nurturing aunt, wise grandfather and countless caring adults, Adolph was able to overcome his challenges, and now helps others to do the same.

Now get ready to travel on a journey of rags to riches whereby Adolph understood that “The more he learned, the more he earned. And that skills pay bills.”

He’s not a speaker, he’s a master teacher, a clinical & educational psychologist, a professor and dean, a business owner, a husband and father of eight, and most importantly, he’s been where you are…but he wants you to know that you don’t have to stay where you are.

Join me in welcoming Dr. Adolph "Doc" Brown III, "The Playful Professor!"

Source URL: https://www.docspeaks.com/middle-college-students-intro